

WAR DANGERS PROVE SAFEGUARD OF PEACE

MILITARY PREPARATIONS OF FAC-
TIONS IN IRELAND INCREASE WITH SUSPENSE.

FORCES ARE ESTIMATED

Will American Sympathizers of Nationalist Volunteers Support
Cause With Sufficient Funds.

London, July 6.—With every week of suspense in Ireland the future of the military preparations of the Ulster and the Home Rule volunteers increases. The present tendency among the volunteers of the south is to accept leadership by the Nationalist party which John Redmond offered them. Thus led, there would be a clear division of Home Rule and anti-Home Rule men into hostile armed camps. The very danger of bitter civil war, which such a prospect presents, furnishes the best safeguard of peace.

Correspondents at Dublin and Belfast have written of the situation from the Nationalist and Unionist points of view. The most interesting unpublished, of the Orange under Sir Edward Carson for taking charge of affairs by force if a provisional government is set up, and the fact that the Ulster Nationalists have used their influence in Ulster councils to postpone radical action until a Home Rule parliament has been established in Dublin. The great question which confronts the Nationalist volunteers is how far their American sympathizers are likely to come forward with funds for their arms and equipment.

Have Vast Force.
Dublin, July 6.—The estimates of the number of Ulster Nationalist Volunteers vary between 80,000, which is the Dublin Castle figure compiled by the police, and a quarter of a million, which is the estimate given in platform speeches. Careful inquiry shows that there are 50,000 in Leitrim, which takes the lead, about 45,000 in Ulster (increasing rapidly) 35,000 in Munster and 25,000 in Connaught. The difficulty of exact estimates arises from the fact that the movement is not organized from the centre. Forces have sprung up spontaneously in every parish, and so far are only loosely connected with the provisional central body. There has been complete unity of aim and the rank and file include every grade—farmers, laborers, shop assistants, clerks, doctors, lawyers, and country gentlemen. There is a very strong leaven of Ulster soldiers and ex-soldiers. The Connaught Rangers, Dublin Fusiliers and Munster Fusiliers, and their experience is proving useful in the drill.

Moore in Command.
The chief military commanders are Colonel Maurice Moore, who commanded the Connaught Rangers in the Boer War, and Captain White, a son of the General White, who defeated Ladysmith. Recent accessions are Sir Henry Grattan-Bow, a grandson of the great Henry Grattan who had experience in the fifth Dragon Guards; and Captain Bellingham, brother of the Marchioness of Epsom, who is at an advanced camp to the Lord Lieutenant. Military experience, however slight, is a premium, and a medical student, with a little volunteer training, is commanding a sergeant's squad which includes among the privates, a university professor of law.

The army has extremely little equipment and almost no money. But the material is excellent and the enthusiasm unbounded. Mr. Redmond's open association with the movement will remove the difficulty of getting money. The men in charge of the movement are for the most part unknown and there has been much reluctance to provide funds till the public knew who would spend the money and for what.

Radical Party.
The central body consists of twenty-five men, of them fifteen are said to be from Ulster in sympathy with Mr. Redmond, but the more active, influential and effective spirits are members of the Sinn Féin party. They have few supporters in the country and the great bulk of the volunteers are supporters of Redmond. Mr. Redmond offers his cooperation to the central body if he was allowed to nominate an equal number of men on it, pending the election of the volunteer branches of a central executive. Failing acceptance he will recommend each county to govern itself.

This offer was rejected on a hastily summoned meeting of the executives who proposed that each county should elect a representative to sit with them. This has produced strong protest from Professor Kerr who says the meeting was not properly convened and asks for a full meeting when the members would accept Mr. Redmond's offer. Mr. Redmond cannot allow a movement mainly composed of his supporters to be accompanied by a self-qualified body, of which the most active members are opponents of his. Once the volunteers members can hold their convention to check an executive matter will settle itself. Meantime there may be friction which will be obviated to a great extent by making each county govern its own volunteers.

Newspaper War.
Belfast, July 6.—The leaders of the Covenanters in Ulster profess to consider the Nationalist volunteer movement as something not to be taken seriously. These Nationalist bands in the Ulster counties drill spasmodically and are not connected with any central organization. All the local leaders are entirely on their own initiative. In some districts the volunteers are split into factions under opposing leaders who carry on a newspaper warfare.

The Ulster leaders say that the Nationalist volunteers must fall through the impossibility of getting arms. They claim to have many letters from America showing that the Irish there are tired of contributing to Home Rule, and now that they consider an Irish parliament assured, they propose to let those in Ireland settle their internal questions without help. Even if American sympathizers should encourage measures to suppress gun-running in all ports would checkmate them.

"We have two years start in the matter of arming and we mean to keep it," an official of the Ulster Unionist Council said recently.

BORAH OPENS FIGHT TO KILL PROPOSED NICARAGUAN TREATY

Senator From Montana Urges Free
Discussion of Central American Treaty Tangle.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, July 6.—Senator Borah began a fight today to force the consideration of the Colombian and Nicaraguan treaty in open session. He presented a resolution calling for the publication of all investigations by the foreign relations committee, to be put over until tomorrow under the rules. "If I cannot get the consent of the senate to have this Nicaraguan treaty considered in the open," said Senator Borah, "I will be forced to disregard the rules of the senate. I have not attended a single session of the committee since the present hearing began, because I cannot propose to submit the relations of my investigation to the clamp of secrecy in executive sessions. If the Nicaraguan treaty is brought out into the open it will die as it ought to die."

"I believe that treaty is the 'outgrowth of deception, misrepresentation, fraud, tyranny, and corruption, and I am prepared to show it is," said Senator Borah.

Senator Borah declared the treaty was not being negotiated with the people of Nicaragua or the officers they have set up and elected, "but with puppets we ourselves have set up in their government."

Under the rules the resolution went over until tomorrow.

AIMS AN ATTACK AT REACTIONARY RABBIS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Detroit, July 6.—"What you want to do is to cater to the wealthy employers of labor who do so largely support the synagogue. You are afraid of what the rich may say if we take a stand toward justice. You quote the scripture, 'Justice shalt thou preach,' but you are afraid to practice what you preach." With these words Rabbi Steven S. Wise of New York attacked what he called the "reactionary" members of the special conference of American rabbis at last night's session of the convention, being held in Detroit, and demanded the adoption of the report of the committee on the synagogue and the prohibition of child labor. The report was submitted by Rabbi Solomon Foster of Newark, New Jersey.

The convention recommended that the conference "endorse heartily" the principle of the minimum wage, industrial insurance, workmen's compensation, old age pension, prohibition of child labor and the right of workmen to organize.

DOC YAK.

Information that the nationalists are bringing in a body of about 100 men from the tropics from windows as they poured boiling water during the rioting some years ago, has reached Carson's headquarters. "If there is a single act of that kind," said a staff officer, "the building where it is done will be entered, wrecked and every officer killed."

RELIGIOUS TRAINING NEEDED IN SCHOOLS

DECLARED PRESIDENT SWAINE
OF NATIONAL EDUCATION-AL ASSOCIATION.

MESSAGE FROM WILSON

President's Regrets and Tribute to Calling of Teacher Read at Opening of Minneapolis Convention.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
St. Paul, July 6.—"Given a cultivated, trained creature of sound mind and body who goes to work at peace with God and man, the school will be the best place in the world for the growing of the child in practical righteousness and American citizenship. This was the declaration of Joseph Swaine of Swarthmore college and president of the National Educational association, at the first general session of the association, which opened here today. The session was devoted principally to the discussion of the teacher's relation to American citizenship.

Secretary Durand Springer said to the effect that the association indicated a record-breaking attendance at this convention, which is expected to be one of the most important in the history of the association.

Interest in the election of a president to succeed Joseph Swaine of Swarthmore, Pa., was at a high pitch today, and the campaigns of Dr. D. B. Johnston of Rockhill, S. C., and Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of the University of Chicago, were being carried on in lively fashion.

President Swaine's address followed speeches of welcome by state and city officials and a response by Z. X. Snyder of Greeley, Colo. The address was a plea for a "living wage" for the teachers and said the best person for a position should be chosen regardless of sex, and advocated an old age pension system to be provided by the state.

Wilson Sends Regrets.
A telegram from President Wilson to President Swaine expressing regret that public duties prevented him from attending the meeting, was read at the general session. President Wilson said in part:

"Thoughtful people all over the country follow the deliberations of the National Educational association with genuine interest. The problem of education is a realized problem affecting national development and national ideas. I think that no one long associated with the profession of teaching can have failed to catch the inspiration of it or to see how great a power may be exercised through the class room in directing the thinking and the ambition of the generation coming on. I can but fail to realize that nothing less than a comprehension of the national conference is necessary to fit a teacher for the great task of preparation and adaptation to the future, that education attempts."

Other Discussions.
Systematic instruction in our public schools was suggested as a means of solving the problem of how to attain and maintain peace and good will between American and foreign peoples. Secretary Louis Gulick of the Imperial university at Kyoto, Japan, who spoke on the responsibility of American educators in the solution of America's oriental problem.

Professor H. H. Johnston of the University of Illinois outlined a plan for the reorganization of the public school system before the commission on the reorganization of secondary education, and Harry B. Wilson, superintendent of schools, Topeka, Kansas, spoke before the national council on economy of time in education.

Moving pictures in public schools, the negro question and several other problems were taken up at the meeting of various departments.

ORIENTAL PROBLEM UP AT N. E. A. CONVENTION

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

St. Paul, Minn., July 6.—Responsibilities of educators for the solution of the Oriental problem was to be one of the important subjects discussed at the meetings of the National Educational Association which today opened its annual convention here. Prominent educators from all sections of the country were present at today's opening session. Dr. Sidney L. Gulick was to be the speaker on the Oriental problem. He advocates instruction into geographies, histories and other text books, such as materials which give American children and youth more correct ideas as to Asiatic peoples, and develop in this way a proper attitude of respect and good will. Declaring that "the prosperity of America depends to a large extent upon the presence, the right treatment and the happiness of the immigrant here," Dr. Gulick urged that the children be taught to look with good will upon immigrants of all classes.

A Growing Asset

The cost of conducting a daily newspaper grows steadily each year.

This is because newspaper readers demand an ever increasing service.

The paper must furnish at once a trustworthy avenue of information, and a source of broad entertainment.

Newspapers from the standpoint of national advertising, offer a sure means of reaching actual buyers because they are growing closer to the home all the time, through this policy of meeting their readers' demands.

Manufacturers who want to consider newspaper advertising campaigns are invited to write to the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York.

CLAIM AMERICAN TRUSTS CONTROL MEAT SUPPLY OF BRITISH MARKETS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, July 6.—The Corporation of the City of London is holding a private inquiry into the alleged control of the English meat supply by the big American beef companies. It was proposed at a recent meeting of the Corporation that the development of these companies be clipped by placing a limit upon the number of stalls they may have in the Smithfield market, but upon adverse report by a special committee, it was decided not to interfere. The committee reported that the conditions of the business, and the nature of the trade have very materially changed during the last ten years, and that the tendency to eliminate the middleman, or commission agent, and to concentrate the trade into fewer hands had affected the meat trade as well as other industries. The Corporation decided, however, by 90 votes to 70 to have a private inquiry to ascertain which sections of the market, if any, are under American control. It is asserted that many of the Smithfield salesmen are financed by what is called "trust funds" but the extent of the American influence in Smithfield is not known.

ALLIANCE OF NORWAY AND SWEDEN IS FAVORED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Stockholm, July 6.—The campaign for an alliance between Norway and Sweden continues without a dissenting note. Prominent politicians of all parties are advocating such a course on the public platforms, and in the newspapers. The movement, however, still lacks any official action.

Sven Hedin, the Swedish explorer, and Sigurd Isben, have exchanged visits between Stockholm and Christiania, and each has found public sentiment agreeable to the proposed alliance. The irreconcilable differences which led to the disruption of the union between the two countries in 1905, and which barely escaped causing war, seem to have smoothed out to the extent at least that both peoples desire to unite in a defensive alliance against possible Russian aggression.

The increase in the army and navy of Sweden, instead of exciting the concern of Norway, is greeted there with the utmost satisfaction. It is said, and Norway itself has a strong movement under way for an increase in armaments. Isben, in his lectures here, has urged that the two foreign offices and the general staffs should have some formal arrangement for working together in case of war.

AMERICAN PURE FOOD LAWS GIVEN PRAISE BY BRITISH EXPERTS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

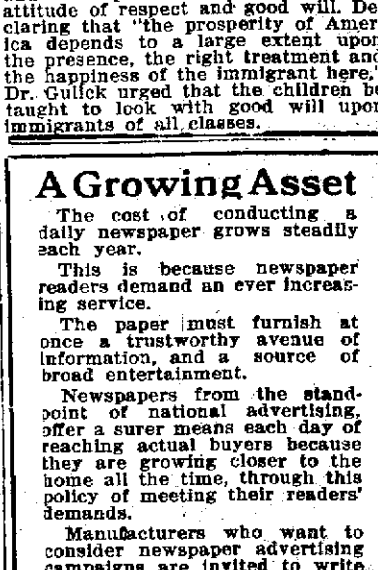

London, July 6.—The United States pure food laws are held up as a model by Alfred Moore, secretary of the British Pure Food and Health Society, who upbraids the Englishman for his laxity along this line. The British public, he says, is defrauded of over $300,000,000 annually through adulterated foods, yet refuses to take the slightest interest in protective laws; and this country, asserts Mr. Moore, "the people seem to prefer to go on having plaster of Paris in their flour, foreign fats and unwholesome preservatives in their butter, imitation cream, cheese with the rind made of lard and tallow, re-dried tea leaves instead of tea, chicory instead of coffee, starch and powdered bean shell instead of cocoa, French chalk masquerading as rice, water and salicylic acid as wine, and so on ad nauseam."

Besides adulteration, Mr. Moore charges that the people also tolerate filthy ways of handling foods, such as carting meat uncovered through the streets.

Chicago, July 6.—A family of four was killed by blows from an ax in their home in the German settlement of Blue Island, a suburb of Chicago. The victims were Jacob Nelesles, a German laborer, 52 years old, his wife, their daughter, 23 years old, and the latter's infant child. The bodies and the blood-stained ax mutilated told the story when the crime was discovered today.

Whether the butchery was the work of a maniac or a person seeking revenge, was not found out in the first cursory investigation. It was learned that the mother of the slain had been living away from her home for some time, and that she had been living in a house in the German settlement. The house, according to Chief of Police, was a small, two-story building, and was located in a quiet neighborhood. The crime was discovered by Jacob Nelesles, Jr., son of the old couple, living in another part of Blue Island. He is a truck laborer and went to the house of his parents, which was near the tracks, to get a pail of water. He told the police he observed the back door of the house was open, and he called a greeting to his mother. Not receiving any answer he entered to investigate, and found the bodies. He said his sister's husband's name was Hamilton, and had left her nearly a year ago.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Sparta, Wis., July 6.—Problems intended to better acquaint them with conditions of actual warfare will be given the national guardsmen of Minnesota and South Dakota, who encamped here today for joint maneuvers with a detachment of federal troops, the direction of regular army officers.

Twelve regiments of infantry, the first and second including the machine gun and hospital corps, the farmer, constitute the Minnesota force. All are equipped with heavy machine guns. The Minnesota militia men will break camp on July 15, while the Dakotans will remain until July 18.

Twelve federal army officers will conduct the tests, which are intended to show the militia how to prepare men for actual hostilities. The exercises will be given to the various divisions to be worked out during the day. These, so far as possible, will represent actual conditions of attack in time of war.

COOPER'S ADDRESS A TRUE MASTERPIECE

FOLLOWED MASSED BAND PARADE AND CONCERT AT ELEVEN IN THE MORNING.

THOUSANDS HEAR HIM

Which Was Upon Patriotic Subjects.
—Mayor Fathers Presided.
—Miss Evelyn Welsh Read.
Declaration of Independence.

Congressman Henry Allen Cooper's address on the morning of July Fourth, in the Court House park, was a masterpiece that it has seldom been the fortune of a Janesville audience to listen to. It was patriotic and soul inspiring, taking up subjects of history and confined to topics of national importance in the development of this country.

The lower end of the Court House Park, where it was delivered, was filled with an enthusiastic audience who enjoyed every word of the talk. The speaker's discussion of the historical significance of the day, that the police officer detailed to preside over the celebration, struck up the Star Spangled Banner, a fitting prelude to the exercises of the day.

Mayor Fathers made the opening address in a few well chosen words. The invocation of the day was given by Rev. George Edwin Parson of the First Presbyterian church, and then Miss Evelyn Welsh delivered the Declaration of Independence in a clear, sweet voice, reaching to the very extreme of the large audience and her enunciation of the paragraphs which declared the thirteen colonies free and independent of England, gave new meaning to the message that has gone down through the years since it was first read. She was warmly applauded at the conclusion of her part of the program.

Then came the address of the day by Mr. Cooper.

He took the liberty to thoroughly analyze the day, and throughout his entire address, he refrained from talking politics, other than supporting the Monroe Doctrine, as the staff of American liberty and freedom.

In part the congressman said: "This is a day of immortal memory. It is the birthday of American liberty. Let me say that never will a time come again when the world will say that the day when the Declaration of Independence, signed on the 4th of July, 1776, can and will never be surpassed by so important an event. It is the most important event, since the history of mankind commenced."

"We are all Americans on this 4th of July. I have talked with the Irish, the Germans, yes, the Swedes today, but we are all Americans today, all Americans. (Applause.) No matter where your ancestry was cradled, yet on this day, beneath this banner, pointing to the American flag of free hearts and home, we all find protection and defense, for we are all true Americans."

"When John Adams wrote the paper that announced to the world our intentions, the United States was only a small nation to battle to death for our rights. Today, after 138 years of growth, this very hall where you are standing, meaning the Court House Park, which was then a wilderness, we meet again on this 4th, to exalt that our country leads the vanguard of the world for the rich heritage of American freedom."

"For more than 130 years, we have shown good government, and on this great land, we, American citizens, 90,000,000 in number, occupy forming as we do, the United States, the hope of the world. (Applause.)"

"Why are we here to celebrate this immortal day? We must not forget the children. It is the children, our future generations, who must know how much happiness rests on the hopes of the men who died that their nation might live. Remember the constitution of the state of Wisconsin. The blessings of liberty can be maintained only by a frequent recurrence of principles."

"It was the Armenians who once said that no rights could ever be attained, and that only privileges could ever be experienced. As late as 1321 four kings said, 'All changes in legislation and in administration of states ought to proceed only from the free will of God, who has held responsible for power.' But there were men better than the sultan of Turkey. There were men who knew better than that. And these men signed the Declaration of Independence, a document with honor, trusting that some good fortune could be derived from it. They have made this day an immortal one. What was the principle of it?"

"Citizens, look into that old Independence Hall in Philadelphia, on that day in 1776, when Hancock, Adams, Franklin and Thomas Jefferson walked into the hall to sign the document which the great paper was to read and perhaps signed. They spoke to us, as well as themselves. The war had been going on for a year, the government was poor, and there was little or no money in the treasury. They did not falter, and they signed it."

"But from that time up to the present, the speaker said, we have seen wonderful changes. If George Washington were to come back here and should undertake to hold a conversation with any of you, he would have a great deal of trouble under standing one-fourth of the words you use. He never heard of a trust—or a trustbust. In 1776, there was only one corporation in the United States, and that was a small insurance company in Philadelphia. George Washington never heard of a moving machine, a sewing machine, a thrashing machine. I take the thrashing machine back for George, ran one for seven years. (Applause.)"

(Hearty applause). Conditions are crowding us at the present time. The pressure is high, but we shall take matters cool and be pronounced victors at the last.

"A very important question that confronts us is the famous Monroe Doctrine. Only yesterday I read a statement by a man, who declared that this doctrine was folly, and should be given up as a failure. Friends, we must not give it up, and we never will give it up. (Applause.) It means practically the salvation of nations. In the last analysis, it means that no nation of the old world shall be allowed to increase its territory on the western hemisphere. Why should we support this doctrine, as we are going to? Supposing that Japan or Russia were to own Mexico, then between us and Russia, Japan or Mexico, would be only the Rio Grande river, a stream barely larger than your own stream, the Rock. What could prevent the enemy from crossing the river with a large army? If it is not plain that we must have a large standing army ready to defend the United States? That is my way of solving the problems that may threaten our country."

"More than all this, our country is the history of the father, the tradition of the mother, the future hope and destiny, freedom, and inalienable rights forever go on, and on, seeking prosperity and enjoying peace, until time shall be no more."

A loud applause followed the speaker's address, which will go down in the history of the city as one of the finest patriotic addresses ever given here.

MRS. H. G. CARTER HAS PASSED AWAY

Beloved Resident Succumbs Friday Afternoon at Pleasant Street Home.

Mrs. H. G. Carter died at her home on Pleasant street at 6 o'clock Friday afternoon, July 3, in the fifty-first year of her age.

She had been a patient sufferer for many months from a disease which baffled skill, and her friends had long believed that there was no hope of recovery.

Mrs. Carter's life was spent in Janesville. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schicker, and was married to Harry G. Carter in October, 1882, and assumed at once the responsibilities of wife and mother. By the little boy that she found in the home, while not permitted to see her face, never realized that she had taken the place of his own mother, who had passed on, and the bond of love which united them strengthened with the years until it became to both a sacred possession.

Mrs. Carter possessed the rare graces of womanhood which won for her a place in the hearts of all who knew her. Cheery, kind, and out beyond the border, the expected has happened, for they have fulfilled their mission, but death always comes as a sad surprise when the tragedy occurs before the years of expectancy have expired.

So the death of Mrs. Carter comes as a shock to the community where she lived and wrought, and where the impress of her active life was always felt for good. She was a favorite in social and civic life, and a devoted member of Trinity Episcopal church. Generous sympathy will be extended to the home, where her presence was like a ray of perpetual sunshine.

Beside the husband and son, the immediate members of Mrs. Carter's family remaining are two sisters and a brother, Miss Elizabeth Schicker of Janesville, Mrs. Ryder and Mr. Frank Schicker of South Bend, Indiana.

Funeral services were held at Trinity church at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon and interment was made at Oak Hill. The pall-bearers were: Victor P. Richardson, Robert Bostwick, A. P. Burnham, Al. Schicker, C. S. Putnam, and J. A. Sutherland.

If Janesville was ever well policed during a celebration or festival it was on Saturday last. In spite of the thousands of visitors, hundreds of automobiles and carriages which thronged the streets from early until late, the day passed with but one accident. Members of the Beloit force, who assisted the local department throughout the day, join with the Janesville patrolmen in the verdict that the crowd was one of the most orderly and well-behaved in their experience.

Twenty-three arrests were made, all of these being men who had taken the occasion to imbibe too freely for their own safety and the comfort of others. A liberal use of the "hot foot" awoke many slumbering drunks to be dragged off to the station to sober up. Twelve were arrested for insulting women and three for fighting. The most serious fight encounter was stopped by Officers Sam Brown and McCauley of Beloit, who arrested a Beloit youth near the corner of River and Milwaukee streets. The youth attempted to escape from the custody of Officer McCauley and received a slight cut when knocked down.

Only one robbery was reported to the police, one man claiming that he had been relieved of a watch. Sneak thieves failed to pay the city a visit as expected and several men, known pick-pockets, were escorted to out-going trains, and put on with orders that they were not to return to Janesville. Saloons were closed promptly at eleven o'clock and Chief Champion saw to it that the law prohibiting women drinking in barrooms was enforced. The regulations of no revolver shooting or throwing confetti were adhered to and the use of ticklers and come-back balls was lessened, their sale having been prohibited by Chief Champion.

Only one serious accident marred the day and it is considered a miracle that a score of people were not killed. A horse belonging to Max Lyons, a young man residing west of the city, ran away from the Franklin street corner about ten o'clock in the evening. The buggy driven by Lyons had become wedged between a street car and automobile and the horse kicked itself loose from the shafts. Lyons held onto the reins and was thrown with considerable force to the pavement. The frightened horse dragged the youth for nearly half a block through the crowded street. Lyons let loose of the reins and was taken to the Shiner drug store where he was given medical attention. He was badly stunned from his narrow escape but sustained only minor bruises. The animal ran down Milwaukee street at a breakneck speed, passing hundreds of automobiles and carriages, and crossed the bridge. The horse struck the stand located in front of the Hayes block which was demolished. William De Young and wife, who were working there at the time, escaped with only minor bruises which were attended to by Dr. Keller. The horse, which finally stopped on Milton avenue, was cut in several places during the wild run.

Only one child was lost in the crowds and the police found him and parents within half an hour's time. The boy's name was John Sullivan and his parents, who reside on Pleasant street, came to the police station shortly after the officers took the boy there. The police had several hours' hunt for two little girls named Shaw and McBeth. The two little misses had been left at home and were playing with a baby suit-case when their parents stepped over to a neighbor's home. The police found the little ladies at the Northwestern station. They were carrying the diminutive suit-case and declared "they were going on a trip."

This morning in the municipal court one drunk was arraigned, and he was arrested Sunday last year there were twenty-five arrested and no celebration was held in the city. August Peterson, this morning's drunk, was given three days' jail term in default of a fine of two dollars on the charge of intoxication, by Judge Maxfield.

Besides the regular police force the following men were on duty Saturday: Officers McNeil, McCauley and Chief Qualman, Beloit; Fred Gillman and Cal. Broughton, Evansville; Al. Smith, George Palmer, Charles Harman, O. A. Karberg and Roy Iman, special police. Several were arrested by Special Policemen John Dalton at the St. Paul station and three by deputies appointed by Sheriff Whipple.

HAS FOUR REMARKABLE ACRES OF CORN AFTER ONLY 40 DAYS' PLANTING

John Fulton, Route 8, town of Fulton, is proud to state that he has four solid acres of corn that extends into the air fully six feet and eight inches. He declares that the crop has been only in the ground forty days, and that it possesses a remarkable growth. It is drill corn, the check corn being of course much higher where it is grown. He furnished a sample of the crop at the Gazette this morning for inspection.

TALKS ON THRIFT

No. 17—Are You Really Independent?

"The difference between the woman with a bank account and the woman without one is the difference between independence and dependence, between happiness and misery. If I could say one word more earnest than any other it would be to make a fetish of 'Thrift.'—Dorothy Dix.

In many cities the big department stores on the last day of the month, advertise to the effect that "all purchases made today by charged customers will be billed on NEXT month's statement, payable in the early part of the month after next."

At one time in his career the writer belonged to the lowly ranks of the book agents.

Preparatory to his work in that pleasant capacity he sat at the feet of a past master in the art of reading human nature. This preceptor laid it down as a fundamental principle of salesmanship that it was much easier to secure orders for delivery and payment at a distant date—for instance a month away—rather than today or tomorrow.

That it always seemed much easier to pay for things in the future than now is the theory of the vampire—like "charge account."

If you always pay cash you can get better bargains and you won't be so sorely tempted to buy things you don't really need but think you do because it is so easy to get them without taking any actual money out of your purse at the time.

But the day of reckoning comes around at last and the aggregate of the trifling amounts is sometimes appalling.

The folly of "Charging it" has been well brought out by a newspaper cartoon showing a man gaily coasting down the "charge it" toboggan slide and then later trudging slowly, very slowly, and dragging his heavy sled after him as he toils up the hill again.

No one is truly independent who is in debt or whose outgo is not less than his income, leaving him a margin of safety and a balance to put into the bank.

Is this not a timely thought for you to consider now that Independence Day is just passed?

RISE AND PROGRESS.
Here is what the Wall Street Journal says of the rise and progress of the democratic party. It is clever and well worth remembering in view of the present conditions.
"People born in New England will remember a Scottish importation which, for their sins, they were compelled as children to read on Sunday. Its dreadful name was Dorr's 'Rise and Progress of Reformation in the Human Soul.' It was just as dreadful as it sounds; and if only the democratic majority in congress had read it in childhood, they would not be astonished at the wickedness of New England, but rather at its essential goodness in circumstances calculated to make virtue repulsive."

"There seems to be a rise and progress in the White House at Washington which will doubtless shock the 'root and branch' destroyers of sinful big business. J. P. Morgan has been in conference with the president. This sinister incident is even likely to be repeated. Although Mr. Morgan has not had time, since his father's death, to demonstrate his capacity, he comes from a family not deficient in brains. That Mr. Wilson should have found at last that such brains were patriotically at the service of the country seems significant of a change of heart.
"Without the least impertinence to the president of the United States, it may be pointed out that he has a tendency to take himself a trifle too seriously. He is an admirable speaker. He knows what to say, how to say it and when to stop. His tact is not conspicuous; but if the members of his cabinet possessed that quality in any remarkable degree it might make him disagreeably conspicuous.
"But Mr. Wilson's patent, though remediable, defect is that he needlessly assumes the infallibility of a rather second-rate elementary school teacher. Some of us may know something, but he knows more than any of us. If the visit of Mr. Morgan to the White House indicates the change of an attitude of mind which is a source of unholy ridicule in Wall street, and of exasperation to the rest of the country, here is a great gain. Mr. Wilson, so far, has received his business advice from people whose names he does not publish, except when they are plainly using the president of the United States as a sandwich man for fraudulent advertising.
"It is superfluous to call President Wilson a man of great ability. He is easily that, but he has needlessly suffered from the way his temperamental defect—call it obstinacy, or strength of character, according to taste—has been used, by worn-out quacks and humbugs, to impose wildly experimental legislation upon a people already suffering from too much bad law."

JANESVILLE ENTERTAINED.
Janesville entertained one of the largest gatherings of merry-makers and conducted one of the best celebrations in the history of the city on Saturday last. It would be difficult to estimate the exact number of visitors, but it is safe to say that never before has the city been the mecca for as many visitors within a shorter space of time. They came not only by train, by wagon, by automobile, by interurban, by carriage, and horseback, but many even walked to the city that they might miss nothing of the day's happenings. From early morning until late at night the throngs on the streets gave evidence of the fact that the fame of Janesville as an entertaining center was spread to the four winds of the heavens. Automobiles with car numbers from states as far away as Texas and New York were to be found in the thousands of motor cars that crowded the streets, while trains from Chicago and the north, east and west brought residents of other cities here for the day's doings. To the men who made this celebration possible much credit is due. To the citizens who took part in the various events of the day scheduled for the amusement of the public there must be a satisfaction of a task well accomplished, for never in the history of the various entertainments has such a parade as that staged under the caption "Nonesuch Brothers' Circus," been seen on the streets. Taking it all in all it was a day long to be remembered and a credit to the city.

THE POLICE.
Much of the success of Saturday's celebration is due to the careful supervision of the streets and the preserving of law and order by Chief of Police Champion and his efficient force of police who worked like veterans and performed wonders in handling the immense crowds. That but few arrests were made and these only of harmless individuals who were taken into custody for their own good and released Sunday morning, that there was but one accident worthy of note, but two losses of any valuables and one a watch, found and returned to the owner, no burglaries reported and little or no disorder at any time, is worthy of especial comment. To handle a crowd such as assembled in Janesville, Saturday, is no easy matter, and Chief Champion deserves the credit for the whole affair. Thousands commented upon the fact there was no trouble and the impression that it has left not only in the minds of residents of Janesville, but of the thousands of visitors, is one that is to the lasting credit of the city and not quickly effaced.

COOPER'S ADDRESS.
Congressman Cooper gave a scholarly, masterful address in the Court House park on Saturday. It was free from any political cant, but brimming over with patriotism and enthusiasm that inspired his large audience and left its imprint in the minds of all who heard it. Mr. Cooper really outdid previous efforts and despite the handicap the stand he spoke from was in the sun, he held his audience for his hour's talk as few speakers could have done under more favorable conditions. The thanks of the city is extended to Mr. Cooper for his interest in our celebration that brought him all the way from Avashington to help Janesville celebrate the Fourth.

So they re-elected Huerta down in Mexico. What does Watchful, Waiting Woodrow think about it, and will Bryan still continue his chautauqua addresses or settle down and earn his salary as secretary of state?

Many a parent gave a sigh of relief on Saturday evening when the last child in the family was tucked in bed. It was a strenuous day, but full of happenings.

It looks as though Villa and Carranza might take a crack at each other while waiting for Huerta to get ready to abdicate.

All fingers reported for duty July fifth on the Janesville boys' hands as a result of the same Fourth celebration.

The mansions are built without thought of expense.
In Millionaires' Row.
The gardens are fine and the lawns are immense.
In Millionaires' Row.
There's silver and gold on the table all right.
The families all eat their dinners at night.
But you don't hear the chirp of the cherubic mite.
In Millionaires' Row.
They all own a dozen or so of machines.
In Millionaires' Row.
They have their coupes and their fine limousines.
In Millionaires' Row.
They have all the gasoline wagons in style.
They smash the speed limit and sport 'round a pile.
But baby cabs? Gosh, there ain't one in a mile.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

A long time ago (do you like that start?), there lived a man who was possessed of youth, health, good looks, and rather a good deal of money. If such a person lived today he would be listed as a prize package. In his day he was eligible, a catch. We forgot to mention that his bump of self esteem was abnormally large—it was.

He turned a corner of his life's road one day and did what you and I, and many, many others have done. He met a young person who turned his life's current completely. As we never could describe people in a way that would make you wish to leave every thing and follow them, we will simply say that she was fair to see.

Our young friend looked, and, as a story teller would say, all his heart went from him. Any way from the sinking sensation in the region of his fifth rib he knew his day had come. He went to the girl's father and urged a speedy wedding. The old gent had not lived all his years for naught. He suggested they wait, that they think it over; they were both very young—let them look before they leap. But he gave his consent.

The preparations for the wedding went merrily on. Life for the young man seemed all that could be desired. He took it all as a matter of course. As we mentioned a ways back, he was given to conceit. Now the rest we are reluctant to tell. It is not nice to chronicle anyone's heartaches, but to leave you wondering what happened next would be to have you think this was a mystery story.

One late afternoon, after a day spent in sewing, the young woman went out into the flower scented fields to rest awhile. As she neared the stile there came towards her a young man. It was not her young man, and she had promised to marry him. He was interested in the brand of masculinity approaching. He, however, did not know her history, but he did know she was fair to see and he bowed low. She passed, accompanying him, with a you-are-the-best-I-ever-met look.

"Art is Long and Time is Fleeting."
The sentiment, "Art is long and time is fleeting," in Longfellow's "Psalm of Life," is adapted from one of the aphorisms of Hippocrates, the celebrated physician of antiquity. "Ars longa, vita brevis." "Art is long, life is short." The meaning, of course, is that the time required to attain perfection in any art is long, while the span of mortal life is short, and we must therefore make the most of it if we wish to accomplish anything.

For the second time in the man's life he suffered a heavy shock. She was his mother. She was the woman who had left his foster father for the young man at the stile.

As the government is about to dissolve the tobacco trust again, it might be well to hurry and save all the coupons possible.

Thus far there is no report to the effect that anybody has got drunk on that tango tea which is so popular in New York.

It is contended that women over thirty are eligible to the governorship of Illinois. That makes it safe.

No woman will ever admit she is over thirty.

FINDS BABY'S BODY IN CLUMP OF BUSHES

Woman Picking Berries in Woods
North of City Discovers Ghastly Sight.

The body of a still born babe, found Friday evening in a mile and a half north of the city in a clump of bushes, was buried in potters' field this morning. A Janesville woman who was picking berries, discovered the ghastly sight, almost stepping on the little corpse, which was hidden beneath a hazel brush and partially covered with leaves. Early Saturday morning Dr. G. C. Waufile, Sheriff Whipple and an employee of the Kimball Undertaking company, went to the spot and directed the woman to dig up the dead babe, which was badly decomposed, showing that it had been born for a day or more. Dr. Waufile declared that the dead baby had been born near the place where it was found, and that the police would not be long in making the guilty mother. No inquest was held.

FIND MISSING GIRL AT RESIDENCE ON LOCUST STREET

Miss Lena DeVoll, who escaped from the custody of her brother, was taken to the state home for feeble minded at Chillicothe Falls this morning by Sheriff C. S. Whipple. The girl, who had been missing for several days, was found Friday at a boarding place on Locust street by Turnkey Wogan.

ENJOYED DOUBLE SHOWER LAST FRIDAY EVENING

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Edgerton, July 6.—About twenty-five young ladies attended a double shower which was given in honor of Miss Violet Trevora at the home of her sister, Mrs. C. H. Babcock, last Friday evening. A delightful three-course luncheon was served at five o'clock, the rest of the evening being spent in a social way. Miss Trevora, who is soon to become a bride, was given many beautiful aluminum and china gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Hanson and baby of Madison spent the week-end with relatives here.

Miss Alma Hirsch of Chicago is visiting friends here for a few days.

The Misses Mayme and Josephine Burns, who have been visiting friends at Lawler, Iowa, for the past two weeks, are home.

Miss Camilla Hanson, who spent the past week in Chicago, returned home last evening.

About seven hundred people from Edgerton attended the Fourth of July celebration at Janesville, Saturday. One hundred and fifty people went to Madison today to take in the Ringling Bros' circus.

Charles Turnbull, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Charles Langworthy, returned to his home in Cuba City, Iowa, this morning.

Mrs. D. C. Gile and daughter, Nyria, went to Madison today to attend the funeral of a relative.

Roscoe McIntosh is in Milwaukee for a few days on business.

Lulu Scholl of Whitewater was here visiting friends over Sunday.

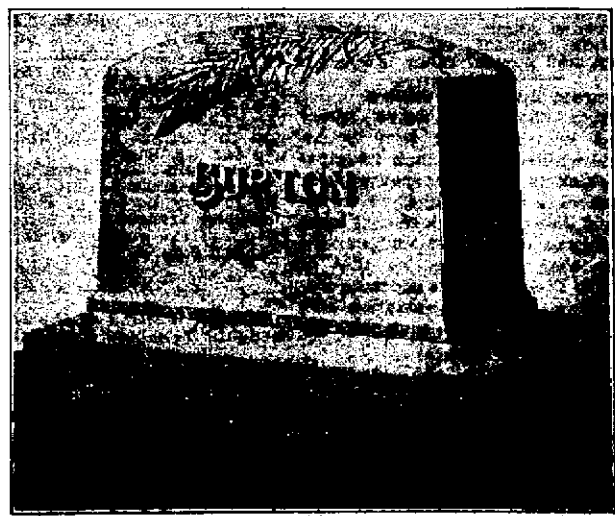

The Misses Anne Sughrue of Chicago, Marie and Katherine Roherty of Janesville are spending a few days with the Nicholls girls.

Richard Brown, who is employed at Danville, Ill., was home over Sunday with his mother.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bretton of Stoughton spent Sunday here with relatives.

Side Lights On The Circus Business By D. W. WATT

On Wednesday night of June 24 at the Five Points when most of the wagon shows had been loaded on to the flat cars, there was an old man interesting a small crowd of the by-standers, by giving them something of the history of his life in the business. This man came to Janesville in 1875 to join the Burr Robbins Show. He hired out to Delavan, the boss hostler, and his work was to drive a pair of mules over the road on a large cage, and on account of his work he was christened Mulesey.

For thirty-nine years with all the different shows that he had traveled with, he has been known only as Mulesey, and appears on the payroll under that name. While he has only traveled with three different shows he has never missed a season since joining out with the Burr Robbins show, thirty-nine years ago. I don't think that twice the money that he earned for his work with the show would be any temptation for Mulesey to quit the business and go to work on a farm, although the work might be much easier, and shorter hours.

To his crowd of interested listeners, Mulesey was bemoaning the fact that he had not met his old friend, Dave Watt. He said that he was one of the first men that he knew in the business that "always had been nice to me, and when I would get broke between salary days, he would always stake me to a dollar to tide me over. And I never thought that I would visit Janesville with a show and not see Mr. Watt."

I should certainly have enjoyed a visit with the old man, and while one pair of mules seemed to be his limit to handle, he was a man that never drank, was always reliable, and as a rule stayed with the show the year around. For there is always something to do for a reliable man like him in the winter quarters. He has been with the Wallace show for twenty years and for many years back has driven a large pair of mules on the water wagon. Mulesey boasts of the fact that he is the only man that he knows who climbed on the water-wagon twenty years ago, and is still there. As a rule, a man of his kind is kept by the show the year around, for while they are not high class drivers of long teams, they are capable as far as they go, and the manager always knows where to find them.

Al Moore, the clown, had several friends in Janesville, and during the evening performance several "Hello, Al's" came from the reserve seats. And others said, "Is that you, Al?" This they thought would annoy him, but not Al. He was always there with an answer, and speaking of clowns, he is one of the classiest ones and one of the highest salaried men in the business. It is he that plays a baseball game and represents the entire team. When Al first introduced this, it made one of the hits of the country, and soon placed him in the front ranks as a clown.

A few days ago there appeared in a certain newspaper an article written by a supposed newspaper representative of the Ringling show, part of which I will give you in this article.

In this article the man of supposed knowledge of the business in his description of the great shows and the men who own them, juggles with millions of dollars as though they were children's toys. He never stopped for a moment to think that it is only a few years back that not even the largest shows of the country would take in a million dollars during an entire season. The following article is only a part of the work of the over-zealous press agent.

For the circus business of America is the Ringling business. "They own the Ringling Brothers' show, the Barnum's, which was later Barnum and Bailey's, the Forepaugh-Sells shows and what is left of Buffalo Bill's and Pawnee Bill's Wild West, and Ranch '101," and oh, lots and lots of other shows.

"And they are the boys who started in the barn lot at Rababoo, Wis. They are the 'circus trust' of America."

The chances are that the government never will complain because the Ringling boys (for they always will be boys, no matter how old they get) are a "trust." They own lots and acres of circus grounds, and many of them they bought when they did not need or want them; out of sentiment when some of the competitors of the days when they rode in wagons were in hard luck.

Some they bought because they wanted to preserve the names of the famous old shows.

Some they bought so that they might direct the routes, and some came down to some of the town boys. This shows could not reach. Some they wanted because from them they could get new acts and new performers for the "big shows," and some they own because when the public has come to think that over some famous show, in the big shows they can send him to the smaller ones where he may perform before those who have never seen the circus.

There is too much sentiment in the circus business for it to be a despotic trust. The Ringling Brothers' show, the Barnum's, which was later Barnum and Bailey's, the Forepaugh-Sells shows and what is left of Buffalo Bill's and Pawnee Bill's Wild West, and Ranch '101," and oh, lots and lots of other shows.

SAYS NOBLE IDEALS ARE THE ATTRIBUTES OF A STRONG CITY

Rev. S. T. Kidder Gives Patriotic Address at Union Services Sunday Evening.

At the union patriotic services which were held at the Baptist church last evening Rev. Samuel T. Kidder delivered the sermon. He took as his subject "The Song of a City." Taking for his text Isaiah XXVI: 1-2, "In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah:

"We have a strong city,
Salvation will He appoint
For walls and bulwarks.
Open ye the gates!
That the righteous nation
Which keepeth faith
May enter in."

He spoke as follows: "It is a song of a future which may become present; a song of a city beautiful and mighty, built and equipped to shelter and inspire a strong and generous manhood, a pure and gracious womanhood and a chivalrous, patriotic youth."

"What then is a 'strong city'? What makes and keeps it strong? If we have a strong city it must be strong first in many aspirations. The type of manhood and womanhood which prevails in a city is its brand and quality mark. High or low, broad or narrow, it is what we make it. The boys, the men of the future, will catch the tone—whatever we give them and shape their lives and ambitions by it. A strong city must be strong in neighborly cooperation. Each for all and all for each. It means united sympathy in the common welfare with narrowness and prejudice put in the background."

"Third, a strong city should be strong in business integrity and enterprise. Integrity comes first. Mere enterprise without integrity becomes but a rope of sand in a business way."

"Again the strong city must be strong in just and upright government. Magistrates and citizens must work together to enforce the laws. It will not do for me to breaking one set of laws when I want my neighbor punished for violating another sort. A dead letter official is an affront to liberty and a premium set up for vice."

Other points which were brought up by the speaker were civic cleanliness and municipal beauty, high intellectual ideals and broad educational advancement, including our continuation of neighborhood centers for civil and social discussions, were commended. A city must be strong in its moral and spiritual atmosphere, said Dr. Kidder. The churches stand for this but the homes are chiefly responsible. Finally the city of the strong is a "wide open city." Wide open to all that is best and sweetest, and to nothing else.

"Open ye the gates that the righteous nations which keepeth faith may enter in."

"I went marketing with the steward of the Ringling shows when he ordered his supplies for one day. This is what he ordered:

"Four thousand five hundred pounds fresh beef, 300 dozens eggs, 800 pounds bread, 150 pounds of butter, 25 bushels potatoes, 12 bushels other vegetables, 150 pounds crackers, 25 pounds tea, 150 pounds coffee, 300 pounds sugar, 12 cases canned goods, 100 pounds lard, 2 barrels flour, 10 gallons milk, 5 cases milk, 30 gallon cans fruit, 100 packages breakfast food and half a wagon load of the incidentals of cooking."

"To feed the horses, dogs, elephants and other animals he ordered 10 tons of hay, 5 tons of straw, 300 bushels of oats, 750 pounds of raw meats and other smaller items."

"There are more than a dozen races represented among the performers. There are Spaniards, Chinese, Japanese, Javanese, Austrians, French, Germans, Indians, East Indians, Balkans."

"Of the five brothers who started, Otto is dead, and his portion of the Ringling shows he left to Henry, a young brother so they will still be the Five Ringling Brothers."

The Hotpoint Electric Iron

It's the iron with the hot point, necessary because the point, always shoved forward into the damp goods, loses most heat, and therefore needs most heat supplied to it. Another important feature original with the Hot Point Iron is the attached stand, which eliminates lifting, and upon which the iron is easily tipped.

No pad is ever needed, for the handle is always cool, and this is one of the evidences that the electric heat is applied only where needed and not wasted.

Its plug and cord are interchangeable among many other appliances, a feature of convenience and economy.

Thorough satisfaction and durability are assured by the fact that its Heating Element is guaranteed for ten years. The price of the Hotpoint Iron is $3.50

A Rough Brick and Wide Siding House---By John Henry Newson

"Home of Character" No. 106-R

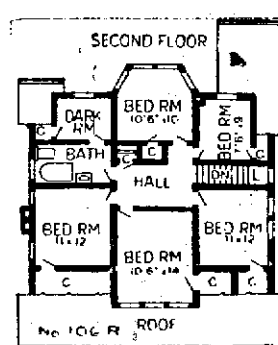

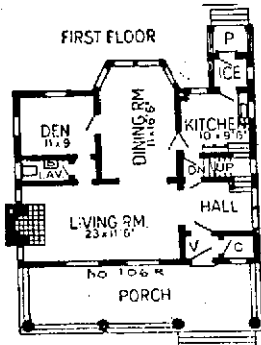

This house, while in plan similar to No. 106, has been carried out in an entirely different exterior by the use of brick from the grade to the top of the first floor windows, wide siding in gables and shingle roof. The hip roof on the dormer as also over the small attic windows gives the design an individuality that is not common. The porch railing is worked out with boards equally spaced with a pattern sawed in the edges of each, which contributes to the individuality of the design.

The hall is entered through a vestibule, off of which is a coat closet, and the living room occupies the rest of the front of the house. The dining room opens off of the rear of the living room with a large bay window. There is a den and lavatory accessible from both the dining room and living room. The kitchen has a combination stairway to the second floor, which has four large bedrooms with a small fifth bedroom, which makes a convenient child's room or sewing room. A dark room for photography is provided off the bathroom, where a sink and running water is installed.

Except in the larger cities where building costs are of necessity high, this house 35x26 feet, should be built for about $4,000.00.

If you are thinking of building let The Gazette Homes of Character Department help you through advice from John Henry Newson. Address your inquiries to him "Homes of Character" Dept., The Gazette. Give the number of houses concerning which you make inquiry.

AUTOMOBILE PARADE
A PRETTY SPECTACLE

MORE THAN TWO HUNDRED MACHINES IN LINE ON EVENING OF FOURTH.

PRIZE TO BUGGS' CAR

Councilman P. J. Goodman's Car Was Strong Contender, Taking Second Place—Third to Doheny.

Over two hundred automobiles were in line in the grand automobile parade which formed a principal part of the celebration of Saturday evening, and the procession of brilliantly decorated cars was most spectacular, serving as a fitting finale to the day's program.

Most of those who saw the Nonesuch parade in the afternoon remained to see the evening attraction, and words of appreciation were heard on every side. More than a hundred cars were elaborately decorated, while scores of machines trimmed with flags and bunting formed in line behind those of more pretentious design.

The first prize of $50 was awarded to the car owned by Robert Buggs, driven by Arthur Hager. The entire body of the big touring machine was concealed with adornments in lavender and white, and tiny electric lights enriched the effect of the decorations. French lilies were entwined around and around the car and a bower was placed over the tonneau. The occupants in the car were Miss Anna Fitzpatrick and little Misses Ruth Brunnum, Lillian Buggs, Loyla Munson.

The second prize of twenty-five dollars was won by the car entered and driven by Councilman P. J. Goodman. His machine closely rivaled the winner in beauty. The decorations were white background with pink flowers. The most striking effect of the decorations was the canopy on the rear in which was seated little Miss Mary Zanias. Streamers of ribbons led from the top of the bower of flowers, illuminated with electric lights, to the front of the car. Mrs. A. Gaffney of Chicago also rode in the car.

The third prize was won by Philip Doheny, the decorations being in pink and white, and the fourth by the car of P. R. H. Gridley, which was adorned with a background of white bunting and covered with flowers.

The judges were Edward Bailey, W. P. Sayles, D. King, Charles Snyder, Fred Sheldon and J. McVicar. The committee in charge of the parade, to whom is due the major share of credit for the great success of the undertaking, were, Chairman, Rev. George E. Larison, Arthur Jones, Charles A. Muggleton, E. A. Kemmerer, I. F. Wortendyke, Leo Ames, George Decker, G. C. Olin, J. S. Field, Stanley Yonce and Bruce Jeffris.

The routing car of Arthur Jones was first in line and was occupied by Arthur Jones, driver, Chief of Police P. D. Chapman, Mrs. A. Jones, Mrs. R. Jones and Miss Lois Jones of Albany were here on Thursday to attend the funeral of Miss Edna McKenzie. Brodhead did not celebrate the 4th of July but there were many picnic parties along the Sugar river.

Miss May Mitchell left on Thursday on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Mitchell of Clarksville, Iowa. She was accompanied by her little nephew, Master Stuart Mitchell.

Those who were in the line of procession when the parade was made up on Milwaukee avenue were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. McGinley and daughter Gertrude; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cunningham; Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Benson and two children; Mrs. O. E. O'Brien and Mrs. Walter Pletcher. The Benson car was decorated in pink and white.

The car of A. E. Bingham was gaily decorated in red and yellow streamers with bunting prominently displayed from all parts of the machine. Those in the car were Mr. and Mrs. Bingham, Anson Mayhew of Milwaukee, Miss Alice Betmer, Milwaukee, Miss Mary Bostwick, Miss Helen Bingham, Mrs. G. A. BLIND STUDENT IN BUSINESS IN CITY

Handicap Which The Blind Have to Contend With Is to Follow Occupation.

The great handicap which the blind have to meet is not altogether their blindness, but the attitude of seeing people towards them, either in considering them subjects of charity or in under-estimating their ability to follow ordinary occupations. To overcome these handicaps there is a great effort being made throughout the civilized world at present to give the blind an education which will enable them to follow so they can become independent, self-supporting citizens.

One of the methods which has been tried successfully in England and Canada is the sale of tea. One concern has given its entire attention to the packing and handling of what is known as "Braille" tea, a tea which is sold only by blind, or partially blind, people. We are undertaking the introduction of this means of obtaining a livelihood among the pupils and ex-pupils of the Wisconsin School for the Blind. One of our present students is putting in his vacation at this work in the city of Janesville. We trust that when he calls upon the people of this city they will give him a cordial, courteous treatment. He is not seeking charity, but is selling an article equal to or superior to any article of its kind on the market at the same price. He is entitled to your business on this basis. I hope he will get encouragement.

The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth

By HABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Webster"

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young

Copyright, 1914, by F. G. Brown & Co.

She turned away from him to stare out at the window again. On the sidewalk the rush of city life went on tumultuously. Half an hour before she had thought the street sordid and ugly. It had changed. The street lights, now clear and white, were circled about by lovely halos. The voices of the children were sweeter and gentler. Next door the servant, who was still at work, sang a lilting Irish ballad. Through it ran a constant iteration of "My own sweet lad."

"Dorcas," Merry spoke hesitatingly, "you said you trusted me?"

"I do." The girl raised her head with a quick gesture.

"I cannot explain now," he began. "I cannot ask you to be my wife until something which looks like an utter tangle has been straightened out. Can you go on trusting, even if I cannot explain?"

"Yes," Dorcas laughed. "I can go on trusting you indefinitely."

"Don't," he cried, "don't say—indeed, I want you now, darling, and—forever."

CHAPTER XXI.

From the Top Gallery.

On the same night that Zilla Paget took up her residence in the Wentworth home Grant Oswald sat beside his desk, dictating letters to his secretary. He listened while the tinkle of the overture ceased.

"Has Mr. Wentworth come in yet?" he asked when an usher entered with a telegram.

"No, sir; we're watching for him. Nobody has seen him."

"Ask him to come here as soon as he arrives."

None of the employees of the Gotham recognized a man beside the stair of the upper gallery, where a steep iron railing jutted out upon the side street. The rain fell softly and he was muffled to the chin in a drab overcoat. A felt hat was drawn over his eyes. He emerged suddenly from the shadow to lay his hand upon the arm of a boy who went springing up the grated stair.

"Here, do you want to sell your ticket for a dollar?" he asked.

"Sure," cried the boy emphatically.

"Say, mister, why don't you buy one for yourself? They're fifty cents, if yet git in line at the window."

"I don't want to stand in line."

The boy thrust the slip of pasteboard into Wentworth's hand, seized the money, and fled to take his place at the end of the line which straggled round the corner from Broadway.

Enoch waited until a throng began to press its way up the steps. He pulled his hat down close about his forehead and the rim fell to his eyes. When he reached out his hand to the attendant at the door, the man did not look at him; he was trying to stem a tide of human beings and make certain that each one had paid his way.

Wentworth moved inside the door and glanced at the gray coupon, then he passed to an end seat in the third row. He laid his hat upon the floor, pulled off his damp coat, and waited for the curtain to rise. Although the clatter of voices about him was insistent, he heard them like a dull garion. Once he rose to allow two girls with their escorts to pass, then seated himself again with his body hunched forward, watching the musicians clamber through a low door below the stage. The leader lifted his baton and the overture began. A man who pushed unceremoniously past aroused Enoch from his listless mood. He turned and stared at a girl who sat beside him. The lines on her wan face were etched, not by the years she had lived, but by a girlhood spent in airless places amid the roar of machinery.

He sat watching her with an impassive stare. A dreamy look crept into her face. The orchestra began to play an inconsequential thing in which there was the trip of dancing feet and a sway of lithe bodies. He could see the lines smoothing out in her careworn face. Her ungloved fingers beat time to the music with perfect rhythm. Then her hand went out in an unconscious caress to the thin, shabby lad, who sat beside her. He clasped it and turned to her with an eager smile. Wentworth sighed.

The curtain rose. People who sat close under the roof listened with a tense stillness, which was never disturbed by the rustle that occasionally ran through the orchestra. The story of the play had grown old, threadbare and uninteresting to Wentworth, but it moved these men and women to the quick. During the first act the girl beside him turned to her sweetheart and spoke in a tremulous whisper: "She's a cruel devil!"

Her eyes were bent with hatred and scorn upon Zilla Paget, who stood looking down at Merry. His guilt had been discovered. He sat beside a table with his face hidden in his outstretched arms, while the wife hurried upon him a torrent of bitter contumely. Once his body shook with a half-stifled sob. Little Julie clasped his hand, but her terrified eyes were turned upon her mother. Wentworth had seen the woman in a towering passion; now she threw herself into the fury of her role as she had done in real life, pacing the floor like a caged tiger. She paused at Merry's side half exhausted.

"Think of the child," he pleaded miserably.

"The child—to perdition with the child!"

Into Enoch's memory leaped a scene long forgotten. Upon the edge of a battlefield, after a bloody encounter, he had once been pressed into hospital service. Anesthetics were not at hand and he had helped by main strength to hold a mutilated soldier while the surgeon amputated a shattered bone. The agony of a groan, which the man tried to stifle, haunted Wentworth for months. Some time in his life Merry must have heard such a sound and was repeating it. Then the woman upon the stage laughed.

"Damn her!" whispered the lad, who sat holding the girl's hand.

Wentworth smiled absently. He watched Dorcas make her entrance. Something stately and high-mettled, like an unconscious brawler, had been added to the dignity which was his sister's great charm. This dignity constantly put Zilla Paget at a disadvantage; she was coarsened by it, brutalized, and cheapened to a degree. The contrast dawned quickly on a gallery audience.

"Ain't Miss Wentworth sweet?" whispered the girl by his side.

"Sweet?" repeated her escort.

"She's a peg higher 'n sweet. She's game, game clear to the spine. The peroxide liddy's a bruiser. I'm aching to bat her in the snoot."

"You hold your hands off her, Charley," answered the factory girl with a giggle. "She could lay out your runty little carcass with one swipe."

Enoch stared at the rest of the play through moody eyes. When the curtain fell on the second act Zilla Paget appeared on the stage alone to meet uproarious applause mingled with jeers and hissing. Wentworth gripped the arm of his chair as he watched her sweep the house with a triumphant gaze. A brand of hate which has the red of murder in it tore at his heart. He rose, tossed his coat across his arm, groped beneath the chair for his hat, then he slammed down the seat and went out. On the stair he met an usher.

"Mr. Wentworth," cried the boy. "I've been looking everywhere for you. Mr. Oswald wants to see you in his office about some bookings."

Enoch descended without answering him. He paused once to push his arms into his coat, but he did not enter the office; instead, he turned and walked down Broadway. The rain had ceased, the sky was clear, and the stars were shining. He tramped on heedlessly. He realized suddenly that he was far down town in the business heart of the city. Overhead hung the sign of an old-fashioned hotel. He opened the swinging doors and walked to the desk.

"I want a room," he said peremptorily.

"What price?" asked the clerk.

"I don't give a damn about price. I want a room where it is quiet, where there is a good bed, and where I can sleep as if I were dead."

CHAPTER XXII.

Facing the Situation.

Enoch had never been a drinking man. The sight of drunkenness had frequently aroused in him a species of stomachic revolt; therefore mere physical repulsion had done much to keep him from one form of debauchery. During the days of utter desolation that followed his sister's departure he turned to whiskey as the sufferer from insomnia seeks relief in an opiate. It did not bring ease, however, either of body or mind. He went about in a dull, half-sickened stupor, hating himself and the world. One night, in a lonely room of the hotel where he had taken refuge, he sat in the darkness for hours thinking; then like a flash he saw himself. It seemed to him that for a second a shutter—somewhere, perhaps in some remote lobe of his brain—had flashed open and he saw not only his present condition, but his future. It was not a pleasant phantom.

A half-empty bottle of whiskey stood at his elbow. He stared at it for a minute with a scowl, as if it were an actual enemy. A feeling of nausea crept over him. He lifted it, carried it to the wash-bowl, and poured the liquor down the drain-pipe. Then he laid the empty bottle on a tray and set it outside the door. He filled his pipe with tobacco, pulled a chair to the window, sat down, and stared at the lights of the city. He fell into one of his introspective moods. He began to trace backward every step he had taken since the day he exhaled the forfeit of Merry's bond. He felt like a vessel which had slipped its moorings and had been unmercifully buffeted by one tempest after another. Each one had done its work so ruthlessly that he was a human derelict left swamped and scuttled. The phrase "a human derelict" stuck obstinately in his brain; it described him vividly. Already he had had more than his deserts. The vengeance of Zilla Paget was the last straw. The woman's image flashed before his eyes; he heard her satanic laugh and saw a

"I've Been Looking Everywhere for You."

Seating vision of his picturesque golden-haired loveliness as he had slammed the door and left his home.

Wentworth gritted his teeth savagely, then he looked at his watch. It was close to midnight. He went downstairs, paid his bill, ordered a carriage, and drove to the Waverly Place house. As he stood fitting the key noiselessly into the lock his heart beat tumultuously for a second or two. He opened the door stealthily and passed through the vestibule. The house was still and a lamp burned dimly in the hall, as Jason always left it until his master returned. He hung his hat on the rack, stole upstairs to his own room, switched on the electricity, and glanced about. He locked the door and undressed swiftly. Ten minutes later he was sleeping the death-like sleep which follows complete exhaustion of brain and body.

He did not wake till noon. Jason answered his ring. The old negro entered with hesitating steps.

"Good morning," said his master.

"Jason, do you know how a guest lives in a hotel when he wants to be alone, absolutely alone? He eats in his own room, his mail is brought to him, he goes and comes without a word being spoken to him, by anyone in the house. You understand?"

"Yassir."

"I wish to have that sort of service in my home until—your mistress returns. If it is necessary, engage another servant to look after your duties. I want you to wait on me exactly as I have explained. You can do it, Jason?"

"I'll be mighty glad to do it, Marne Enoch."

Wentworth returned to the theater and took up his duties as if nothing had happened. His associates greeted him with their usual courtesy; still he felt as if a drop curtain had fallen between him and the world where his daily labor lay. Women and a few men shrank away from him even while they seemed trying to be polite, sometimes kind.

Zilla Paget made no secret of her change of residence. She flaunted the news of it abroad and Wentworth's lapse from the conventionalities of life made a nine-days gossip in theatrical circles. It even agitated moralities which had been esteemed lenient. The reason back of the intensity of feeling was not, in every case, shocked virtue, but Dorcas was loved, while the Englishwoman was held in universal contempt and hatred.

Curiosity threw out its dragnet among the people in the company, who watched Wentworth go and come among them day after day, treating Miss Paget with an aversion which was colder than anything doled out to her by the players at the Gotham.

"I tell you, it's a pose with Wentworth," said John Breen, the man who played the janitor.

"Pose nothing," answered his wife scornfully. "Wentworth hates Paget worse than any of us do, and that is going some. I've watched them together. She knows he hates her, even if she is living alone with him under the same roof. He's afraid of her. I've seen it in his eyes when he didn't know anybody was watching. If I don't miss my guess there's blackmail or something like that back of it. She's fit for it. Wentworth's a goat in some way that we're not on to."

It was several days after his return to business before Enoch met his sister. He heard in a casual way that she had rented an apartment and had taken Alice Volk with the two children to live with her. Their first encounter was an ordeal to each one. They came face to face in the foyer. Enoch said "Good morning" and held out his hand. The girl held it for a second, looking up into his face with eager wistfulness. The ghost of a smile broke over Enoch's haggard face, then he glanced backward as the glass door behind him slammed, and Zilla Paget came rustling in.

He turned brusquely and entered his office. The jaded look in his eyes had changed to shuddering hate. Dorcas passed out to join the throng on Broadway. She felt chilled and lonely. She did not realize that the sun was shining.

Loyal Irish Father.

It is certain that no immigrant is more loyal to wife and child than the Irishman. Out of nearly ten thousand charity cases in which a wife was the head of the family, the greatest frequency of widowhood, and the least frequency of desertion or separation is among the Irish—The Century.

Fighting Power of Horses. Wolves and other wild animals dread the hoofs and teeth of wild horses; and the domesticated ones often defend themselves successfully from enemies.

From Girlhood

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

is a keen enemy to the physical weaknesses of woman. A medicine prepared by a regular graduated physician of unusual experience in treating woman's diseases—carefully adapted to work in harmony with the most delicate feminine constitution.

It is now obtainable in liquid or sugar-coated tablet form at the drug store—or send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial box, to Buffalo.

Every woman may write fully and confidentially to Dr. Pierce and his staff of physicians and Specialists at the Lavaline, Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and may be sure that her case will receive careful consideration, and that experienced medical advice will be given to her free.

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar coated, they granulate easily to take on candy.

Practical Suggestion.

A man rather untidy in his personal habits was discussing the question of a new waistcoat with a friend. "What color would you advise?" he asked the friend. "Why," said the friend, "I'd get one of soup color."

THE STUNNING PART. She—Your wife's new gown is a stunner, isn't it? He—Huh, you ought to have seen the bill.

What summer fruit?

THE change may be critical and cause untold suffering in after-life. The modern young woman is often a "bundle of nerves"—"high strung"—fainting spells—emotional—frequently blue and dissatisfied with life. Such girls should be helped over this distressing stage in life—by a woman's tonic and nerve—that has proven successful for over 40 years.

Dinner Stories

The attendant led the visitor into the violent ward. "For heaven's sake!" exclaimed the stranger, "what are those lunatics doing with that straw, leaves flowers, feathers and ribbons?" This is where the hat styles originate.

In a Great Western railway carriage on the way up to London, a youth had disturbed and annoyed the other passengers by loud and foolish remarks, during a great part of the journey. As the train passed Hallowell lunatic asylum he remarked: "I often think how nice the asylum looks from the railway."

"Some day," growled an old gentleman, "you will probably have occasion to remark how nice the railway looks from the asylum."

Apologies of foreign honesty. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler tells this story.

"On a foreign railroad," he said,

"a commuter had a row with the conductor. At the end of the row the commuter turned to a friend and said:

"Well, the P. D. R. will never see another cent of my money after this." "The conductor," who was departing, looked back and snarled: "What'll you do? Walk?"

"Oh, no," said the commuter. "I'll stop buying tickets and pay my fare to you."

Always Continue to Hope. We do not command ourselves to hope. We just hope. It is a part of our vitality. It lifts, inspires, nerves us. It is as indefinite as life itself. It is an inseparable function of a sound mind. The ceaseless struggle of hope, on the invisible battlefield of the mind, is one of the wonders of creation.

ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR

So many thousands of women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that there is hardly a neighborhood in any city, town or hamlet in this country wherein some woman has not found health in this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy. If you are suffering from some womanly ill, why don't you try it?

Make Your Advertising Persistent

Two young men, mechanics, decided to go into the Automobile business. They rented a store, bought all the accessories; ran one really good ad—then waited for things to come their way. As we mentioned at the beginning, these were two young men. Perhaps that was why they waited for things to come their way.

Had they been the right sort of young men, from the business point of view, would they have waited—or would they have got in the ring and solicited business for the new firm? Would they have visited the advertising manager of their home paper, contracted for a space of their own and in that space kept persistently hammering home to the public at large that they were in the Automobile business? That men might come and men might go, that they were there to stay. That they were going to play the game fair and square. That men might come and men might go—they would still be caring for autos at the old stand, in a way that once tried would bring a return visit.
